Abstract

The paper mainly deals with the scenario of quality and safety management of fruits and vegetables in Bangladesh. Fruits and vegetable producer and traders are largely using different chemical for ripening and long shelf life, but no specific control over them. An act on the safety food production and marketing is under process. Research and education on quality and safety management of fruits and vegetables are inadequate in Bangladesh. Future prospect and practical steps to overcome these problems in Bangladesh are properly addressed. Scope of future collaborative research and development program in this aspect may be explored.
